In the fourth volume of The Masks of God, Joseph Campbell examines the rise of modern, individualistic mythology in Europe, from the twelfth century to twentieth-century modernist art. Part of Campbell's four-volume exploration of world religion and myth, this edition includes over forty new illustrations. It delves into comparative mythology, covering topics such as Christianity, the Middle Ages, the Renaissance, Arthurian Romance, and Modernism. This work is considered one of Campbell's major contributions to the study of myth.
